Cyberbullying

What is Cyberbullying?

- Cyberbullying is a form of bullying, which is carried out through technological tools such as the internet

Unfortunately today it is a constantly increasing phenomenon, which if not resolved and fought in time can even lead to suicide

How does it manifest itself?

- It manifests itself with online intimidation such as in social networks, chats, sms, emails.But also through anonymous phone calls
- The cyberbully is almost always an unknown person, who does not reveal his name so as not to risk legal consequences

What are the behaviors of a cyberbully?

Masquerade: stealing a person's identity, to post vulgar or offensive content in their name

Happy slapping: attacking a person by filming and posting the video on the internet

Exclusion: To exclude a person from an online group to hurt them.

Exposure: Making the victim's private information public.

Harassment: sending in an obsessive and repeated way messages containing insults.

Flaming: Offensive and vulgar messages usually posted on forums and online discussion sites.

Doxing: is the dissemination of personal and sensitive data via the internet

Cyberstalking: repeated harassment on the web, real threats to cause fear. A very dangerous obsession.

Trickery: gaining a person's trust and then sharing private information

Impersonation: pretending to be another person by deceiving people who read the messages
